Why Cub Scouting?

- The Cub Scout program is a fun, family-based, well-rounded program for boys and girls that will positively impact their life while learning the value of serving others, strengthen the bonds between each other, family, friends, adult partners, and their community.
- The lessons learned during Cub Scouting allow a child to grow in their ability to be careful and responsible young people.
- Because kids get to fun and exciting things in a safe environment.

Cub Scouting Teaches Your Child

- Builds confidence, through recognition by adults
- Feelings of belonging, by building friendships with other children in their Pack and at their school
- Understand the value of family, by fostering quality family time for children and their adult partners
- Enhances social skills, through interacting with other youth and adults
- Good decision making, by instilling values of helping others
- About their community, by participating in field trips and other activities

How Cub Scouting Works

- Each child is part of a Cub Scout Pack which has other families from their community/school in it.
- Some months, one other Cub Scout outing usually takes place for the kids: a field trip, outdoor activity, or attending a larger Cub Scout event.
- Cub Scouts learn many new skills and have new experiences – earning belt loops and patches along the way.

What Is Expected of Us as A Family?

- Cub Scouting is a program that invites and encourages families to do the program together. The most impactful part of Cub Scouting is the involvement of parents.
- Your family will grow closer through the activities you do in Cub Scouting. Siblings often attend many Cub Scout meetings and activities.
- Many Cub Scout families are active in a variety of other activities as well. Cub Scouting is a program that can fit into a busy schedule as not every outing or meeting must be attended.
